

The Story

A man takes a trip to France and gets mistaken for their new head chocolatier. He doesn't speak French, so he can't tell the people that work there that they have the wrong guy. He enters the kitchen but doesn't understand any of the machinery. Eventually, because of the urgency of the staff, he starts mixing and putting things randomly into a mixing bowl of chocolate. He pours it into a pan, and everyone waits for it to cool. The employees serve it to the crowd outside, and they all love it. The man leaves the store and bumps into the real chocolatier. The chocolatier thanks him and heads inside. The man goes back home to and tells his friends about his trip to France.

